GREEK MYTH

What is myth? In its simplest form a myth is a story. These stories are attached to specific cultures, have a hero at its core, can deal with historical information or can be an attempt to explain nature. We love these stories because our brains are hardwired for stories - we can't get enough of the love, heartache, revenge, and redemption of Mount Olympus.

Project Due Dates:

- 10/31 - Choose character to research
- 11/9 - Finish Slideshow
- 11/13 - Have vision board complete
- 11/13 - Start presentations (with vision boards)
- 11/13 - start writing piece
- 11/30 - Final draft of writing piece due

PRESENTATION:

Students will research, create, and then present a Google Slideshow that represents their knowledge of their chosen character. The slideshow will be graded on content shown, layout, and presentation skills. The presenter will have a template for the slideshow.

VISION BOARD:

After completing the research of your character from Greek mythology we're going to have a bit of fun. You will create a modern vision board for the character. A vision board shows in pictures and quotes what the creator may want. For example, if you were creating a vision board with Apollo in mind it might be full of pictures of instruments and new archery equipment.

WRITING PIECE:

You all know we need to practice our writing. For this project you will be responsible for writing one creative piece. Either a journal entry with your Greek character as the writer or a narrative about the day in the life of your character. The piece is expected to be (at least) one typed page long.
